6:00 - 7:00PM (Happy Hour)

Smart-Space 3F, Level 9, Core F, Cyberport 3

Companies of all sizes and industries are changing their focus and realizing upstreaming supplier quality has tremendous value.

- What is the real cost of poor quality?
- Should we react to the increasing pressure and refine our supplier quality roadmap?
- What are the available tools to enable supplier quality through collaboration?
- How will our suppliers react to this change?

Biography of Stephane Boivin:

With over 20 years of experience in the supply chain industry, Stephane clearly understands the challenges involved in end-to-end manufacturing. The idea of developing Pivot88 came out of his own experience with the supply chain. His focus at that time was on remote quality management and supply chain optimization. Stephane has more than 12 year experience in China within Quality management process. During his career, Stephane held several executive positions, at some of the following companies Toyota Industrial Group of Company & Deloitte Consulting and Ryder Logistics.

Today with Pivot88 his focus is on helping companies overcome supply chain challenges through the use of emergent technologies providing visibility into the most vulnerable and riskiest parts of the supply chain – within suppliers. Stephane holds an MBA from UQAM University and is a certified professional logistician from the Canadian Logistics Institute.
